WE must confess to some difficulty in deciding at what point to commence commenting upon the lonient sentence passed Tuesday last by the CHIEF JUSTICE upon the youth CHUN KWOK WHAH, who was convicted of forging orders for cigars upon dence and impartiality of the laws. storekeepers in the Colony. There is so much in the proceedings creditable to the good sense and good feeling of all concerned that it would be a far pleasanter task to dwell only upon this aspect of the matter than t ullude to certain irregularities connected with, These irregularities are, however, of so serious a character that they cannot be passed over; and we trust that in commenting upon them we shall not be deemed to underestimate the credit that is due both to the CHIEF JUSTICE and the REGISTEAR GENERAL upon the broad merits of their action in the

It has often happened in cases of this kind that that officer after prosecuting, as in duty bound to conviction, has urged upon the Court such reasons as occurred to him for leniency in the sentence, and it would have been quite competent for him to have done so in the present instance. If this was not considered a suitable mode of proceedings with entering his house on the 25th instant, there could be no reason why the Judge Treaking open a box and stealing therefrom 400 should not of his own motion have taken the circumstances connected with the case into consideration, and given his sentence socordingly. (Army and Navy Gazette.)

Vienna, Sept. 26th .- Our North Pole explorand that they were to pass through the "Prater-strasse" to the Aspern bridge, thence on to the Ring, and traversing the Inner Town to the botel " Zum Romischem Kniser;" and on that line of road, some two English miles long, the population of Vienna collected ogether yesterday, swelling more and more until, by the time fixed for the arrival, it formed one dense mass. Above all, on the first part of the line the multitude was such that circulation lind almost to come to a stop. This being no official ceremony, the people were left to themselves, and there was none of that constant interference which is so irritating. The result was that people shifted for themselves as they best could, occupying every site which promised good view. Many people had been there arly, constructing stages, bringing up carts and waygons, and placing them as advantageously as they could. The Aspern suspension bridge offered in this respect a most extraordinary sight; people having climbed all along the chains up to the pillars, forming thus, as it were, a living decoration. Above, the windows and balconies were equally crowded, and many had been adorned with flage and carpets; so that they presented quite a festive appearance. The official reception was in the railway stution. There was a departation sent by the Ministry of War and Marine to greet them in the nume of the Army and Navy. Lieutenant Payer belonging to the former, and Lieutenant Weyprecht to the latter service: The deputation was headed by Vice-Admiral Poikh, and was joined by a deputation from the carrison of Vienna. Then there was the Burgomaster of Vienna, Dr. Felder, with a town; deputations of the Geographical and Geological Institutions and of the Academy of Sciences; and, last, the Vienna choir, to greet them with a song - A number of tickets had been issued for the station, or rather the courtyard, where the ceremony was to be held. Rows of ladies were there, with bouquets, as the rethe arrival of our explorers, and this arrival was really impressive. A month ago the members of the Expedition had been all but given one exception, the engineer, Kirsch, who lies buried in the new land which they have discovered. Indeed, it seemed as if the fatigues and dangers passed through had only served to steel them. Above all, the Dalmatian sailors looked the very picture of strength and energy. the Polar sun had bronzed them rather more ban their southern sky would have done. It was quite touching to see men who for months rad braved death every day stabiling there, on p in band, quite embarrassed at the honour done them. Official though the reception may be styled, it was so only in name, for the feelings ou both sides were too strong to be kept within bounds. It was the return of the lost. But, warm as the first greeting was, it was nothingmade their way slowly through the crowd, which pressed up to the currisues, waving. That triumphal progress was almost sufficient to repay them for all the fatigue and dangers experienced, and they must have been formidable indeed. All through the first winter they were in constant danger of having the ship and all that was in it crushed by the pressure of the ice, which was such that in a few minutes' time a barricade of 30 ft. and more rose up before the bows of the ship, burying the house which they had erected on the ice. The time from October till March they passed in this mental torture of expecting every moment to be crushed. Then came, through the next summer, the efforts to get the ship out of the ico, and the disappointment, after months of wearisome labour, of seeing all thrown away, and continuing to be drifted about helpless. Fortunately, the sight of land on August Blst, 1873, came to raise their drouping spirits and stimulate the hope that all was not ailure. But first there were the tortures of Tantalus to be gone through during the long winter months, when they know the land to be quite close, but were not able to explore it qutil perhaps the position of the ship shifted and the and disappeared from their sight for ever. It was not so, for from March 9th and May 4th bree exploring journeys were undertaken. The irst lasted only six days. The second and chief expedition lasted thirty days, by which it was ascertained that the land as far as discovered is about the size of Spitzbergen, and consists of several large manace intersected by fjords and surrounded by islands. A large passage called the Austrian South separates these masses and forks under 62 degrees north latitude into a north-casterly arm which could be followed up to Cape Pest in the furthest north. The mountains are dolomitio. Their middle elevation is from 2,000 to 3,000 feet, only towards the south they may rise up to 5,000. All the depressions between the aummits are occupied by glaciers of gigantic size, as they only occur in Arctic regions. - The vegetation is much pourer than that of Greenland, Spitzbergen, or Nova Zembla, and in the south, except for Polar bears, it is devoid of animal life too. Several attempts were made to pass through the country, but they were found impossible; mountains barred the road; so progress was tried along the coast line, and the more the explorers benetrated porth by west the more the temperature rose, and the coasts of Crown Prince Rodolf hand were found to be tenanted by myriads of birds, clks, &c.; traces of bears, foxes, and hares appeared, and seale lay on the ice. In spite of treacherone nature of the read, it was continued o 82 deg. 5 min., where at Qape Fligsly a wide expanes of water only covered with ice of recent formation was seen. In spite of this the explorers think the open Polar son a delusion. Without raising a theory about the possible connection of this new land with Gillis Lund in the south west, the opinion is that it bears out up to a certain point Peterman's assumption of an inner arctic archipelago. After setting up over 160 miles to the ship. The dangers in the effort to reach the open sea, after leaving, wore, perhaps, among the greatest to which the travellers were exposed, and at one time there was every probability of another arctic winter before them, but fortuintely for them and adience they have come among us instead and welcome they are. Vienna, September 28th.—A second Austrian Arotlo Exploring Expedition is being prepared to start next summer. One half of the expedition will seek to advance to the north, under Lieut. Payer, by way of East Greenland, and the other bulf, under Count Wilckez, will proceed vis Siberia. The object of the expedition is to oscertain if the newly-discovered Franz Joseph Land is a continent or an ishind.

In the elections of February, 1871, while Paris was still besieged, the Legitimist candidates polled 100,000 of the 150,000 votes on the re gieter, while the party of the Republic did not obtain more than 20,000. It was believed that nothing but the division between the voters favourable to the Government and the voters favourable to an Imperial restoration prevented the so-called "Conservatives" from gaining uncertainty. Under a Republic, a very Conseranother, though less brilliant victory, three vative policy may be pursued safely. Under a weeks ago. To call the Imperialists "Conservative" was, no doubt, to give them a very awkward and ill-fitting title. They who begin by proposing an appeal to the people under universal suffrage, and who hope to end by changing once more the form of the Government of France, and getting rid of the only great power which the country at present contains, that of the National Assembly are about as much Conservatives as the Eng lish Republicans who advocate overturning th Throne by an appeal to the people, and substituting for it, in the people's name, a sovereign Republic. But the reason the Imperalists have ventured on this occasion to call themselves Conservatives is simply this,—that they would prefer prelonging the existing regime of sus pense, to putting an end to it by declaring the existing form of government final. prefer Marshal MacMuhon as a nonde acript ruler and with six yours' delay, to Marshal MacMahon as President of an avowed Republic with no delay at all. Thus they are conservative of suspense rather than o ending suspense by making the provisional state of things final, and us Marshal MacMahon's Government, owing to some mysterious sympathics and antipathies of its own, takes as yet the same line, and-regards political suspense itself as the true object of its Conservative protection, the two parties in the Department aside as much as possible all worldly cares and of the Maine-et-Loire were able to effect some kind of coalition at the second ballot against the Republican candidate, M. Maillé. The · coalition, however, was not a success. There were too many Imperialists, who saw that to vote for the regime of suspense under March MacMahon was to sacrifice the democratic principles on which slone they can hope to restore the Empire. And probably, too, there were not a few electors who had been indifferent before they saw the chance of striking an effective blow for the termination of suspense, but who became interested in the election as soon as the real solicitor, and implied that you would resist the battle appeared to be between the cause of the Republic and the cause of delay. At all events. on the second ballot last Sunday, it turned out that M. Maillé, the Republican candidate, had polled 6,228 votes more than he obtained in the first ballot, while the quited parties of Imperialism and the Septembate police 4.334 fewer votes than their combined poli on the first ballot, the result being a triumph of the Republican candidate by 3,390 votes over the union of his opponents. The result sceme to us the more satisfactory, that it betrays not merely the atrength of the Republican party, but a growing conviction that it is bound as a clergyman of the Church of Engthe true Conservative party of France,-in land. other words, that Conservatives, no less than Liberals, can hope for more successful action under the form of a Republic than they can either under ambiguous provisional governments, or under dynasties as much bated by great acctions of the French people as they are times a day, so that there may be no more fires loved by small sections thereof. It is most in Constantinople, another example of this probable, if not evident, that the stronger vote | Mahomedan revival is to be found in the fact, polled by M. The attempt failed. France recoiled on her side, the intended monarch recoiled on his side, from the only conditions on which the restoration might, as it was supposed, have been effected. The temporary conditions were all exceptionally, -indeed, "accidentally, -- favourable to the project, but the permanent conditions were all so much the reverse, that the conspiracy collapsed almost at the moment at which it was published. The pro-Monarchical President and the pro-Monarchical Ministry were forced to take refuge in a dilatory excuse. The regime of suspense was On LONDON. the pearest thing possible to the regime of monarchy. It was not very near, for, as it has proved, every day's delay has been a delay not favourable, but unfavourable to the intended scheme, and the combination then so nearly completed is now almost as inconceivable as a proposal to found a new dynasty out of a private French family. The Monarchy has been drifting rapidly away ever since the delaybegan, and though, on the other hand, the idea of an Imperial restoration, then totally impossible, has considerably gained in favour, yet the real strength of that scheme is democratic, and all the genuine democracy of France adheres. not to the Empire, but to the Ropublic.

We have said that there seems some hope of Marshal MacMahon's discovering for himself that the truest role for French Conservatism to China Traders' Insurance Company's Snaresplay is to accept the Republic and build on the ines of a Republic. Not only did Marshal MacMahon, in his recent tour to the North, openly appeal for the support of "moderate men of all parties,"-a great change in his moral attitude since the time when he told the Assembly, not many months ago, that he could not accept advice from any of the politicians who had voted against him on the 24th May, 1878 but it is evidently now the one given to official spokesmen to repeat this ulterance of Marshal MacMahon's, and so to recall to the minds of the Republicans the possibility of founding the Republic with the Marshal for its first President. Only the other day, at Etrepagny, at a banquet given in an assembly where the Monarchiets greatly predominated, M. > THE BISHOP OF LINCOLN AND HORSE-RACING OLERGY. Some correspondence has lately passed between the Bishop of Lincoln and the Rev. J W. King, vicar of Ashby-de-la-Laund, the owner of Apology, the winner of the St. Leger, respecting Mr. King's connection with the turf The Bishop has just forwarded to "Mr. Luunde"

the following remonstance:-Sir,-It is with very great regret that I see from the public papers describing the races Al Doncaster on the day before yesterday, that my former remonstrance with you has been of no avail. I had hoped that you might have been induced, at your advanced uge, by regard for your own spiritual welfare as well as for that of others, to listen to my earnest expostulations. But, with much sorrow, I perceive that you have shown no signs of remorse for your offence in bringing discredit on your sacred profession and in inflicting injury on the Church of which you are a minister, and in causing scandal to ber members, by training racehorses for the GEN. work to which you pledged yourself at your ordination, when you promised " to forsake and set studies," and " neither to offend yourself nor to cause others to offend." and to be "a wholesome and godly example to the people," especially to your own flook. You are the incumbent of two NEW benefices in this diocese—Ashby-de-la-Laund! and Bassingham-and the latter of these, on which you do not reside, is largely endowed; and you hold these two pastoral cures on the condition that you will promote the welfare of the Church and not bring disgrace upon ber and do her grievous wrong. In your reply to my former letter you referred me to your EXTREMELY LOW PRICES. exercise of my authority. Whether the law in its present state, which needs amendment, may enable a bishop to correct such offences as these I cannot say with certainty, but I had rather appeal to your own conscience without resorting to legal proceedings, and I now cutrest you once more, solemnly and affectionately, in the name of our Bleesed Lord, who is not only our Saviour but our Judge, and in the name of the souls for which he died, either to resign your pastoral cures or else to relinquish a course which seems to me to be altogether at variance! with the encred obligations by which you are

ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY, WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION: An Anglo-Chinese Dictionage, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong, INOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese baye of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects m.machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in catenso. Each and every word in fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces, which have peretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following fasts are submitted for consideration Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Obinese characters, and Medburst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English Press () fice, or to the following Agents:-words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters.
